

Steve Monahan is an associate professor of accounting at the University of Utah, David Eccles School of Business. Prior to joining the University of Utah, he was a member of the faculty at INSEAD and the University of Chicago, Graduate School of Business. He received his PhD in Accounting from the Kenan-Flagler Business School at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, a Masters of Accounting from the University of Iowa, and a Bachelor of Science in Economics from the University of Northern Iowa. In 1993 he received the third highest score in the United States on the uniform Certified Public Accountant exam. Before joining academia he served as a compensation and benefits consultant in the tax division of Arthur Andersen.

Steve's research focuses on two related issues: (1) the role of accounting and non-accounting information in the fundamental analysis process and (2) the economic causes and consequences of alternative disclosure policies/regimes. He has conducted a number of studies in these areas and published articles in leading academic journals including the Journal of Accounting Research; the Review of Accounting Studies; and, The Accounting Review. He also published the monograph Financial Statement Analysis and Earnings Forecasting in Foundations in Trends in Accounting®. He is currently a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Business, Finance, and Accounting and the Review of Accounting Studies. He also served on the editorial boards of Contemporary Accounting Research (2005-2010), the Journal of Accounting Research (2005-2018), and The Accounting Review (2010-2014 and 2017-2020). During 2013 through 2015 he served as an Associate Editor of the European Accounting Review.

Steve has taught numerous courses in PhD, MAcc, MBA, EMBA, and executive programs. When teaching he focuses on helping participants develop a deep understanding of two related issues: (1) the role played by accounting information in evaluating performance and estimating value and (2) how to design and implement disclosure and reporting policies that promote value creation.
