BIO: Sonia Salari, Ph.D. is an Associate Professor in the Department of Family and Consumer Studies (FCS) at the University of Utah. She is a family sociologist with a specialty in gerontology, race and ethnicity. She received her doctorate at the University at Albany, in upstate New York. Her work has won national awards, including the Gerontological Society of America dissertation award. She was awarded a National Institute on Aging NIA postdoctoral fellowship at the Carolina Population Center, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. It was there that she served as an advocate for victims, at the Orange/Durham Coalition for Battered Women.

Her faculty appointment at Utah began in 1995. In 2005 she won the College of Social and Behavioral Science Superior Teaching Award and in 2008 the University of Utah Distinguished Teaching Award. Her courses include FCS 5370 family violence, FCS 5240 adult development in mid/later life and FCS 5962/6962 family policy and advocacy. For over 20 years, her students have partnered with a variety of non-profit organization to lobby the Utah State Legislature.

Dr. Salari’s community service work includes membership in Utah Domestic Violence Coalition and the Utah Commission on Aging. In her department, she served as graduate director of the human development and social policy (HDSP) master’s program. At the university level, she was a previous member of the University Teaching Committee and the Executive Committee of the University Faculty Senate.

Known for her research on domestic violence homicide and elder mistreatment, she is author of over 30 publications, as well as her book, Family Violence Across the Life Course: Research, policy and prevention (2015, Kendall Hunt).
