

Gregory E. Smoak, Director of the American West Center and Associate Professor of History at University of Utah specializes in American Indian, American Western, Environmental, and Public History. He completed an MA at Northern Arizona University and a Ph.D. at the University of Utah. He has taught at Colorado State University and the University of Minnesota. The University of California Press published his book Ghost Dances and Identity: Prophetic Religion and American Indian Ethnogenesis in the Nineteenth Century in 2006. He has recently completed an environmental history of Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument under a contract with the National Park service and is revising that report for publication. He is also the principal investigator on three current projects with the NPS Pipe Spring National Monument and Zion National Park. Smoak's association with American West Center began in 1988 and has included projects with the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, the Big Sandy Rancheria of Western Mono Indians, the Navajo Nation, and the Utah State Division of Indian Affairs. He has served on numerous committees for professional organizations including the National Council on Public History, the Organization of American Historians, and the Western History Association.