

Kilo Zamora | kilo.zamora@utah.edu

Gender Studies Faculty Member, University of Utah &
Social Change Consultant

Kilo Zamora is known for creating learning environments for leaders to develop themselves and transform their communities. Kilo applies his talents as a social change consultant and a gender studies teacher in the College of Cultural & Social Transformation, University of Utah. His awards including the University of Utah's School of Social Work's Teacher of the Year, Pete Suazo Social Justice Award, Equality Utah Award, Utah Education Association Award, and Utah Martin Luther King Award. Some of his recent successes are consulting on PENN States athletic equity strategies, consulting on Intermountain Healthcare's equity strategies, Lead STEM-Utah on their strategic plan, consulting Salt Lake Arts Foundation to develop a vision for inclusive public arts, developing Weber School District's and Park City's first equity plans, and advocating on range of legislative bills to improve the lives of marginalized people.

Current Projects

- Facilitating the new Transformation Intersectional Collective: focus on intersectional pedagogy
- Developing community engaged learning tools and methods
- Community transformation facilitation training
- Developing long range equity plans for universities, cities, and health care systems.
- Developing university community engagement projects
- Linking climate justice to intersectional social justice actions
- Teaching social determinants of health to inform gender justice movements
- Developing community engagement research to inform institutional policies and strategies.