Libby Haslam, is an architect at GSBS Architects and an Adjunct Professor at the College of Architecture and Planning at University of Utah. She grew up in São Paulo, Brazil and received a Masters of Architecture from University of Utah. She ran a semester of DesignBuildBluff, a design/build program for architecture students that build houses on the Navajo Reservation. Libby is interested in architecture that has a social, environmental and physical conscious and believes that the built environment should force users to question how they should interact with spaces, whether designed, natural or serendipitous.
