

Kevin Coe – Biosketch, 2021

Kevin Coe is a Professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Utah, where he joined the faculty in 2013. Professor Coe's research focuses on the interaction of political communication, media, and public opinion, with a particular interest in the U.S. presidency and issues of identity. He has published more than fifty academic articles and chapters, which have appeared in such venues as Communication Monographs, Communication Research, Journal of Communication, Journal of Computer-Mediated Communication, Presidential Studies Quarterly, Public Opinion Quarterly, and The Oxford Handbook of Political Communication. He is the coauthor of two books, The God Strategy: How Religion Became a Political Weapon in America (Oxford, 2010, with David Domke) and The Ubiquitous Presidency: Presidential Communication and Digital Democracy in Tumultuous Times (Oxford, 2021, with Joshua Scacco). His scholarship has received awards from the National Communication Association, the Religious Communication Association, and the American Political Science Association, and he is a past chair of the National Communication Association's Political Communication Division. At Utah, Professor Coe teaches courses on strategic communication, political communication, communication theory, argumentation, and content analysis. Professor Coe previously spent five years as a faculty member in the Department of Communication at the University of Arizona. He earned his Ph.D. in speech communication at the University of Illinois (2008), and his M.A. (2004) and B.A. (2002) at the University of Washington. He is a native of Tacoma, Washington, and a product of the Tacoma Public Schools.
