

John Nerges is a clinical faculty member of the College of Nursing at the University of Utah. He serves as clinical and didactic faculty in three curriculums; the pre-licensure program, the RN-BSN program, and teaches an online graduate physiology course. John serves as course-lead for the Acute Care Practicum (NURS 3410), which focuses on the care of the hospitalized patient. He is faculty in Professional Roles IV (NURS 4600), which prepares future registered nurses to enter the workforce, and he serves as faculty for Clinical Physiology (NURS 5905) in the graduate program. John is a retired Army Nurse Corps officer with thirty years of military service. His primary focus was nursing leadership, with an emphasis on critical care and trauma nursing. He holds certifications as a CCRN-K from the American Association of Critical-Care Nurses (AACN) and as a SANE-A from the International Association of Forensic Nurses (IAFN). John currently serves as the president of the American Association for Men in Nursing (AAMN), Utah Chapter, and is a member of the Wasatch Front Chapter of the American Association of Critical-Care Nurses. He holds membership in the American Nurses Association (ANA) and the Emergency Nurses Association (ENA). John is currently a doctoral student, the Organizational Leadership track of the DNP program at the College of Nursing.
