On-going projects:

As the Director of the Shoshoni Language Project, I supervise our various activities, including the development of various Shoshoni language programs and the Shoshoni dictionary projects, and the Shoshone/Goshute Youth Language Apprenticeship Program (with various collaborators). We have also produced, distributed, provided teacher training on, and continue to revise the High School curriculum and lesson plans, K-6 curriculum and lesson plans, Head Start curriculum and lesson plans, and the SYLAP curriculum and lesson plans. (Please also see below and our website: <http://shoshoniproject.utah.edu/>)

In preparation. Shoshoni Texts from the Wick R. Miller Collection. (with M.J. Mixco, B. Crum, D. Gould, Elwood Mose, et al.) Bilingual edition with interlinear glossing.

First volume: How the World Came to Be The Way It Is, 38 narratives told by speakers of various dialects of Shoshoni (including Panamint); multiple versions of the following traditional stories: “Cottontail Shoots the Sun”, “How the Number of Months and the Seasons Came to Be”, “Coyote Steals Fire”, “How Pine Nuts Came to Grow Where They Grow Now”, and “Origin of the Indians”.

Future volumes include:

Shoshone Traditional Activities (Ethnography)

Coyote and Others Fail to Heed Advice or are Too Proud

Shoshone Oral History

In preparation. “The Shoshone/Goshute Youth Language Apprenticeship Program: An intensive summer revitalization program.” (with J. Mitchell.)

In preparation. "Forced Alignment for Understudied Language Varieties." (Lisa M. Johnson, Marianna Di Paolo, Adrian Bell & Carter Holt)

In preparation. “A Reconsideration of the Uto-Aztecan Vowel Shift from a Sociophonetic Perspective.” (with R.D. Sykes).

In preparation. (NG) in Utah English (with Abdulaziz Alzoubi & Derron Borders)

In preparation. “On rebuilding a speech community: the Shoshoni Language Project.”

Tongan migration project. From 2012- . With Adrian Bell, PI, Lisa Johnson (Ph.D. candidate), and various undergraduate research assistants. Collaborative project on Tongan post-migration cultural and linguistic identity formation, focusing on health behaviors and language variation. Tongan is a small, understudied language. We are beginning the linguistic part of the project by studying Tongan vowel devoicing and the acoustic properties of /l/. Data collection and analysis in progress.

Our first presentation was "Training Prosodylab-Aligner for Sociophonetic Research on Uncommonly-Studied Language Varieties." at NWA44. (See below for more details.) We have been asked to submit it for publication as a methodology paper.
